

THE NEW ATLANTIS

A JOURNAL OF TECHNOLOGY & SOCIETY

NUMBER 61 ~ WINTER 2020

ESSAYS:

- The Analog City and the Digital City 3
L. M. Sacasas on how online life breaks the old political order
- The Science Before the War 19
M. Anthony Mills and Mark P. Mills on how the technological feats of World War II grew out of curiosity-driven research
- Eat Me, Drink Me, Like Me 35
Tara Isabella Burton asks whether love in the attention economy is unreal
- Turing and the Uncomputable 45
Algis Valiunas on logic come to life
-

REVIEWS & RECONSIDERATIONS:

- Must Growth Doom the Planet? 76
Ted Nordhaus argues that in an age of stagnation, calls to limit growth miss the real problems we face
- Do We Want Dystopia? 87
Stefan Beck on nightmare tech as the fulfillment of warped desire
- The Mathematician and the Mystic 97
David Guaspari on Simone Weil, her brother André, and truths that do not converge
- Why We Choose Surveillance Capitalism 106
Michael M. Rosen argues that Americans don't care about privacy as much as they say
- Inventing the Universe 114
David Kordahl asks whether quantum physicists are making things up as they go along
-